Such conditions, it was stated, were now wist and he was otherwise horribly manproposed to be changed, "and to galvanize these committees and make them a living, working force instead of mere meaningless fictions; instead of furnishing a dumping ground for members who could not be taken care of otherwise.'

Commissions Unnecessary.

Fully equipped for work, it was stated these committees would render unnecessary the creation by executive order of commissions and the promulgation of departmental regulations without authority by congress. The present time had been selected for bringing in the resolution, it was stated, because no charges were pending to invite public attention or to excite the public mind and to abuse partisanship. "There is no particular head," said the report, "which an investigation or inquiry is aimed to hit."

Mr. Sherry of Connecticut wanted the committee on alcoholic liquor traffic included in the resolution, declaring that while that committee had never organized there was important business for its consideration.

AMUSEMENTS.

"The Missouri Girl" was presented for the first time at the Lyric yesterday afternoon to a good house; the evening's performance also saw a good house. "The Missouri Girl" is a story of the "show me" country, and while comedy runs through the entire piece, it is not of the slap-stick style. Miss Johns plays the title role and makes a winsome miss. Fannie Hammond, as the strong-minded mother, is forcible, and W. R. Abram as the sheriff more than sustains his reputation among the Lyric's patrons. The comedy parts, especially the gawky, lovesick, shiftless maid as carried by Miss Rodrique, are more than ordinarily laughprovoking. The bill will continue through the week.
